

TULSA ADVENTIST ACADEMY NEWS BRIEF

2019 RESOLUTIONS

B. C. Forbes, founding editor of Forbes magazine, wrote the following resolutions in December 1919 and many are relevant today:

I resolve...

To strive to contribute something to the world, its work and the people in it.

To give full measure, running over.

To adhere, the best I can, to the Golden Rule.

To go about my activities with greater cheerfulness.

To be more considerate of others.

To be a good teamworker.

To commend more and condemn less.

To talk less and do more.

To try always to see other viewpoints than my own.

To sympathize more the aims and aspirations of others.

What will you do in 2019?

“

ALWAYS KEEP IN CONTACT WITH THOSE BOOKS AND THOSE PEOPLE THAT ENLARGE YOUR HORIZON AND MAKE IT POSSIBLE FOR YOU TO STRETCH YOURSELF MENTALLY.

OSWALD CHAMBERS

SPRING 2019 HIGHLIGHTS

Opportunities galore!

Starting in January with Southwestern Adventist University's HoopsFest for basketball teams, TAA students will have many educational opportunities to enhance their mental, physical, and emotional well-being.

After HoopsFest, many high school students will participate in Southwestern's Music Festival on February 10 in Dallas' Morton H. Meyerson Symphony Center with other academies from the Southwestern Union Conference of Seventh-day Adventists.

Our spring break is the first week of March and our school-wide academic fair will be held on March 28. In early April, high school students will embark on their American History tour of New England.

In between these memorable events are local field trips, so watch for notes in your students' backpacks!

What is love? A TAA 4th grader knows: when a student forgot to bring a gift on gift exchange day, Lucy donated the present she received to the child who would not receive anything. Mrs. Bokovoy schemed with Mrs. Toews to give Lucy a small cash gift equal to the gift exchange. "We wanted Lucy to know that her thoughtfulness was noticed and that she was an example to her class mates of thinking of others," Mrs. Bokovoy says.

Korean Exchange Student Program

The 2019 Korean exchange student program is underway with 20 South Korean students joining us in grades 3-7. Some are return students, but most are here for the first time. A total of 50 students are staying in Adventist schools across Oklahoma. Many thanks to the host families who are helping give the Korean students a taste of American life and Christian values.
